technical affairs; Senior Lieutenant Eduard Bismuth, chief of staff; Senior Lieutenant Heinke (fnu), Ordnance officer; Lieutenant Engelbrecht (fnu), leader of the command company; Senior Lieutenant Hilke (fnu), commander of the ST battalion; and Senior Lieutenant Brocher (fnu), state security service officer. In November 1953, Lieutenant Wladarwa and Junior Lieutenant Oneus were dispatched to the Prenzlau Division, allegedly, to take part in a course of instruction in the USSR. In November 1953, Senior Lieutenant Hilke (fnu), and Lieutenant Weitzer (fnu), were reassigned to a unit stationed at Oranienburg.

6. Weapons.

Weapons of the unit included 52 T-34/85 tanks, with 10 tanks allocated to each company and 2 tanks allocated to the C platoon of the command company; 20 to 30 ST guns of various models, including 4 or 5 identified as SU-100 guns; and 2 PA-64 armored scout cars, which belonged to the signal platoon.

7. Motor Transport Equipment.

The motor transport equipment of the unit included 60 B-3-A and ZIS trucks, including about 40 which were conserved; 3 or 3 full-track ammunition carriers, 3 model M-3 armored personnel carriers, which came in in early November 1953, allegedly from Oranienburg; 1 Pheonon ambulance; 2 repair shop trucks; 2 command cars; 1 commander's car; 1 tank truck with trailer; and 4 IMW sedans.

8. Classes.

Forty percent of the men serving with the unit belonged to the 1930 to 1932 classes; 40 percent to the 1933 and 1934 classes; and 20 percent to the 1935 and 1936 classes.

9. Regional Composition.

Sixty percent of the men serving with the unit came from Saxony and 40 percent from Mecklenburg and Brandenburg.

10. Soviet Advisers.

Three Soviet officers, who lived in the installation were assigned as advisers to the command headquarters.

11. Training.

In late October 1953, several officers' commissions each including two or three officers of the Prenzlau Division and the TV Prenzau inspected the unit in several subjects of training. It appeared that the unit attained training at company level instead of battalion level as scheduled. All vehicles were conserved after this inspection which was followed by clearing work and fatigue duty. The new training year was scheduled to commence on 1 December 1953.
